The case study on Task Force Fox focuses on the NATO Peace Support Mission Amber Fox in the period 3Q-4Q 2002. This mission supported the first democratic elections in the Former Yugoslavian Republic of Macedonia. Taskforce Fox changed lead nation mid 2002 from Germany to the Netherlands. The Netherlands applied Network Centric concepts to conduct this peace support mission very effectively. The ISIS C2 system was utilized in addition to other innovative NCO related technologies and practices. The focus of this study is on understanding the dynamics of how the NCO technologies and practices were utilized and how this impacted organizational performance.
